Request for Action by Congress.

New York, Jan. 13. A Washington special says that the message of the President in answer to a Senate resolution requesting information as to the recognition of Lynch as Speaker of the House of Representatives, was partly colored by the Louisiana question, and that that body is in entire harmony with the President on that point. The document was sent to the Senate this afternoon, and is as follows:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11, 1875.

To the Senate of the United States:

I have the honor to reply, the following resolution of the Senate of the 8th inst., asking for information as to any interference by any military officer or any part of the Army of the United States with the organization or proceedings of the Louisiana Senate, and in regard to the existence of any organized militia in the State of Louisiana, and the circumstances, and extent and cause of any such interference by force, and whether such forces still continue, and if not, the time of their withdrawal, and the cause thereof, and information upon other matters in the resolution mentioned:

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

On our first page will be found the Special Message of the President on the disorders in Louisiana, as presented to Congress and transmitted by telegraph Wednesday. The text has been seriously garbled in some portions by the hasty transmission from Washington, but enough has reached us intact to show that it is the clearest and most comprehensive statement of the Louisiana difficulties which has been laid before the public. It traces the steps pursued by the Executive in the discharge of his sworn duty from the beginning of the disorders to the present, and plainly shows that the responsibility for Federal interference rests upon the lawless organizations that have constantly threatened the peace of the State. We have no time for extended comments upon this strong and candid document, but ask all our readers to give a careful consideration to the statements of a Chief Magistrate who has evidently sought to discharge his duty under circumstances of the gravest difficulty, and who is as evidently determined to exercise his constitutional authority for the preservation of order and protection of Americ n citizens, in spite of the revolutionary course of men recently engaged in armed rebellion.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL COMMISSION

Our news columns have already reported the favorable action of the Legislature upon the recommendation of the Governor for the appointment of ten Commissioners to draft a revision of the Constitution of the State of Maine, and the appointments have promptly been made, the names being given in our despatches from Augusta yesterday. The proposition is that the Commissioners shall prepare a new draft of a Constitution to be reported to the Legislature by February 15, to be ratified before the close of the session and to be referred to popular approval at the annual election next September. That the present Constitution, with its mass of amendments, is in many respects clumsy, and in some respects incongruous, no one compelled to study it through the instrument, will think of disputing, and that some important modifications are demanded by the public interests is equally obvious. The subject has been more or less earnestly discussed for several years and a number of propositions have been made in successive Legislatures for the revision or amendment of the organic law. The idea of Gov. Dingley has been that a Constitutional Convention would certainly be a very expensive, and might possibly prove a very unsatisfactory method, and the experience of New York has induced him to recommend the employment of a commission to frame and submit to the Legislature a new draft, retaining the essential features of the present Constitution, and embodying such new features as seem desirable.

We were inclined from the outset to feel more confidence in the efficiency of ten thoroughly competent men than in the work of a general convention, the membership of which could not well be confined strictly to the class of men best adapted to the treatment of constitutional questions. But it has seemed to us, that objection would naturally arise to the completion of so grave and important a task in the hasty manner proposed by the Governor and authorized by the Legislature. Allowing the brightest time for the members of the Commission to assemble, and assuming that they may be able to divert their entire attention from personal affairs to the duty assigned them, the work of revising the Constitution of Maine must be performed within thirty days, in order to report at the time specified. This is certainly affording scant time for deliberation upon the remodeling of the organic law of the State, a work which involves the most serious questions of personal, municipal and corporate rights and liabilities, the great questions of taxation, legislative authority, etc. Then, the time available for the discussion of the new draft in the Legislature prior to ratification will necessarily be brief, unless the session is prolonged for the purpose, and there would seem to be danger that the natural desire to close up the business and get home, may lead to inconsiderate action.

The Governor recognizes these objections, but urges the importance of acting upon the matter at the present time, upon the ground that the people next year, when there will be a Presidential campaign, will be in no mood to consider any proposition to amend the Constitution, lest it should be made the occasion of partisan excitement, and derive a Presidential campaign. We assent to the probability of obtaining a vote upon constitutional questions at a time when they will be less liable to be influenced by partisan bias, but we are by no means sure that it would not be better to patch the present Constitution along under the few years more it may prove of more serious consequence than to risk mistakes which have so frequently arisen over questions of constitutional construction warn us of the extreme care which is necessary in considering every word and every punctuation mark in such an instrument, and the provoking blunders which occurred in the last revision of our Statutes should inspire special caution in proceeding in a more serious matter. We have recently seen how interests amounting to millions of dollars were affected by the position of a single comma in a tariff act of Congress, and it is easy to see how the revision of a clause in the Constitution might apparently retain its original force, while improving its perspicuity, and yet prove, when subjected to actual test, to lack some essential safeguard afforded in the original text. These dangers can only be avoided by deliberation, care and thorough discussion of every proposed change, and we much fear that the ablest Commission would find it difficult to thoroughly perform so delicate and responsible a task in the brief time specified.

Another important matter of consideration is that of the personnel of the Commission. The Governor has undoubtedly sought to provide a strong board, and a number of the appointments will at once strike the public as eminently fitting. Such appointments should undoubtedly be governed by familiarity with constitutional law and not by personal or political considerations. We observe that local and political impartiality has been sought, two members being taken from each Congressional District; but some of the names are not familiar to the public in connection with the class of questions to be considered, and there is a feeling that personal pressure for appointments may have impaired the strength of the Commission. While in Augusta last week we were informed that the friends of an unsuccessful aspirant for a State office were strenuously urging that a "place" be found for the "gentleman" upon the Constitutional Commission. We notice that the appointment has been made, and if its bestowal was governed by a knowledge of the applicant's qualifications for the duty, no objection can be offered. But if the Governor has been compelled to yield to personal pressure or sympathy, we can only say that the State could much better afford to create a special office than to make a "place" for somebody on a Commission to revise the Constitution of the State. All of the appointments may have been governed with a single view to fitness, in which case our allusions would be groundless; but the expectation that only men of the first prominence would be selected for this duty, taken in connection with the personal efforts mentioned, will naturally elicit some comment.

In the foregoing remarks we have had no desire to appear captious, and so far as the appointments are concerned, there from our own neighborhood are eminently satisfactory. We also sympathize fully with Governor Dingley's desire to secure improvements in our fundamental law in the most practical and economical way. We cannot, however, avoid misgiving at the haste with which the work is to be accomplished, and we hope that the Commission and the Legislature will share in this anxiety to an extent which will induce the utmost caution in dealing with a task of such moment.

THE HOLLY WATER WORKS

A LETTER FROM THE AGENT.

NEWBURYPORT, Jan. 11, 1875.

To the Editor of the Whig and Courier:

I notice in your paper of the 7th inst., a short article copied from the Minneapolis Tribune, calculated to mislead if not misunderstood, and presume you will be pleased to know the facts in reference to the water works at that place.

They are Holly water works, the fourth set that was built. The works were simply two rotary pumps ran by water power. The piping was laid under the direction of an engineer, and not as planned by Mr. Holly. The works, however, have done splendid service, doing for themselves several times over, as any one at Minneapolis will tell you. There is a letter from the City Clerk of Minneapolis recently received by a gentleman in this city, very complimentary upon that point, and the satisfaction the Holly machinery has given in its workings. It has been in operation, nearly seven years, giving domestic supply and fire streams, without any repairs. The city had grown up to the capacity of the works and with a laudable desire to patronize home industry, in contrast was made with a firm in Minneapolis for some additional machinery. Some very good pumps were constructed and put at work in a new and larger building. They of course are without the Holly regulating apparatus that controls the pressure and without the valves that prevent the "rebound" of a rapidly flowing stream when suddenly stopped. They also lack other arrangements for throwing an even steady stream with piston pumps without thumping, which are only found in the Holly machinery.

They are not dispensing with the Holly pumps, but have taken them out of the old building to put them in the new, and while our are having them repaired for the first time since they started, and at very small expense. All their trouble would have been avoided if they had purchased of the Holly Co., who, with their eleven years' experience, have adapted their works to the duties required of it—the additional machinery, the growth of their city requires.

An article in that same Tribune of Nov. 5th, 1868, giving a flowing account of the test of the works, tells the whole story. "One of the rotaries threw a one and one-quarter inch stream all over the court house, through seventeen hundred feet of hose, the court house stood thousand feet from the works and one hundred feet above them. . . . The mains and hydrants were found all right and the pumps worked beautifully."

Sometimes, as was the case at Minneapolis, contractors are made for pipe and laying with parties not interested in the success of the Holly system. In an account of a test in Ogdensburg in 1869, the Journal of that city says: "It is proper to say that Mr. Flagler, President of the Holly Co., preferred to have the test demanded by the contract, that as the Water Pipe Company's Agent was unwilling to have all the pipes subjected to one hundred pounds pressure to the square inch, it was impossible to do so."

In the proposition to Bangor all these contingencies are provided for in the contract, and if there is anything faulty in any part of the work, the prescribed test will find it, and the expense of making it perfect falls entirely on the contractor.

Binghamton is another place quoted as evidence of the failure of the Holly system. A gentleman in Boston wrote to the Water Board of that city to learn the facts. I send you a copy of the reply he received from the gentleman, who has been Superintendent of the Works since they started. I think it will interest you and your many readers. Yours truly,

J. A. RICHARDSON.

It seems that it was one J. G. Berrit, and not J. G. Bennett, who shared $7,000 of the Pacific Mail money with Sam Ward, of New York.

CONSUMPTIVES, TAKE NOTICE.

Every moment of delay renders your cure more hopeless, and more difficult on the judicious choice of a remedy. The amount of testimony in favor of Dr. Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup as a cure for consumption, far exceeds all that can be brought to support any other preparation of any other medicine. See Dr. Schenck's Almanac, containing the certificates of many persons of the highest respectability, who have been restored to health, after being pronounced incurable by physicians of acknowledged ability. Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, taken in the early stage, many of the cases, evidences will show, but the cure is often promoted by the employment of two other remedies which Dr. Schenck provides for the purpose. The additional remedies are Schenck's Sea Weed Tonic and Mandrake Pills. By the timely use of these medicines, according to directions, Dr. Schenck certifies that most new cases of Consumption can be cured.

Dr. Schenck will be at the Quincy House, Boston, on the following Wednesdays, from 9 to 3 o'clock: Jan. 13th and 27th, Feb. 10th and 24th, and March 10th and 24th. Consultation free, but for a thorough examination of the lungs, with the Respirometer, the price is $5.

Dr. Schenck is professionally at his principal office, Corner Sixth and Arch streets, Philadelphia, every Monday, where all letters of advice must be addressed.

MNEMOSYNE.

BY MARY BLODGOOD.

These letters! O'er the faded pile
I linger, thinking (foolish thought!)
That one will answer to beguile
The pain that memory has brought
To day, as erstwhile. Now, as then,
One leads me through them all again!

Oh, what may be of generous life
Disclosed within a slight fold
Of sheeting paper, when the knife
Has opened to its heart of gold!
The ripe pomegranate's crimson core
Is pale beside such sanguine store.

Now comes, as once, and coming goes,
The postman on his round the same,
And yet, ah me! he little knows
How poorer far than when he came
Full freighted from some favoring air,
With these white doves that sought his care.

Beneath the down, a earcanet
Of shining gems each presence wore.
A living flame is in them yet,
And spreads its glow the paper o'er—
With sparkling jewels set in forms
Of light that evoke the ruby warms!

You've seen white sails on soft blue seas—
Flower tufts affame on velvet lawns—
Fair fields beneath fair blossoming trees,
And snowy crests in rosy dawns,
So, bloom that other bloom presents,
Beauty that beauty supplements,

In symbol of the harmony
In which his thought and word had grown
To charming types of symmetry
Each by a subtle virtue known,
Yet perfected by that sweet grace
Of fairness well to distinct place.

Such letters never more to me
Will come as friendship's messengers,
'Tis only left that tender-fingered
My thought retrace the thought that stirs
In these quite words. The tale may lie
Untouched, its muse cannot die!

—Galaxy for February

RIGHTED AT LAST.

(Concluded.)

Grievously perplexed at the effect of his words, Godfrey stood anxious and impatient, while she fought a battle with her tears and conquered them; then, not venturing a look toward him, she drew a step, and almost unconsciously toying with a holy wreath, spake at last, tremulously and nervously:

"I have done very wrong. I only waited—indeed, I only wanted to hear if you had sent—my poor gift—to your—your friend."

He told her half impatiently that the gift had gone almost as soon as she gave it, and so secretly as she had desired.

"And I do thank you more than I can tell," she said, once more voluntarily giving him her hand. "And the sister," slowly and reflectively. "I ask you the thing more—forget that you ever spoke to me as you have just done. There are reasons why I must not and—"faltering a moment—"why I will not listen to such words. No, no, please don't make me cry again," for he was at her side, trying to stop her words. What lover, indeed, would be likely to be put off with such utterances as these? Not he, thought Godfrey, hearkening as she spoke, and he made the hand he had kept and gloves and leave the gray little church, while he eagerly and persuasively pleaded his cause with her as slowly they moved on toward the home she was so soon to leave.

But all in vain! "It can not be!" "It must not be." "I can not tell you why." These were the only answers he could wring from her! No argument, no entreaties could change her, though, poor girl, she had not strength or skill enough to conceal that it was her will, and not her heart, that was rejecting him.

"Will you never give me any other answer?" he asked, as they neared the gate of the White House.

"I dare not think I ever shall," she answered.

"And will you forgive me the pain that my presumption has caused you?" he asked, gently.

"I had almost forgotten tell how near you were and how poor I am."

"How can you! That is cruel," she broke out. "Indeed, you don't know how cruel you are. Ah, Godfrey!" for he held her, all unseen in the quiet shadowy lane, close in his arms for one moment while he said:

"Then I will wait. Whatever it may be that keeps you from me can not last forever. Whether it should last for months or years, I'll wait. I'll have no wife if I can not have you, Emily;" and then he released her, and left her without another word, striding off for a six-mile walk along the old Roman road close by, to cool his hot head and recall what few scenes the last hour had not dispelled him of altogether.

AFTER WAITING LONG REWARD.

The next day brought the work of services, and "Lady Margaret's dole of certain shillings and woolen garments and loaves of bread to six poor women of the parish of Maybeck." Godfrey Bree had plenty to keep him occupied till the time came for his lonely Christmas dinner, for he had declined joining the family gathering at the Hall, and Major Carrie had gone to spend his Christmas from home.

But the dinner was dismal, not even Flop's companionship could make it otherwise. The one thought would obtrude itself: "How long would it be thus with him? How many Christmas-tides must he pass alone? Would his rash love have ever the ending he longed for?" Brooding and depressed, the minutes lagged along heavily. The experiment of the afternoon before was telling on him now, when every word that had passed filled his memory to the exclusion of all else.

He started, as if nervous woman might have done, when a peal at the door-bell rang through the house, and hastened to relight the lamp (he had been sitting idly in the dim-light) as Jim's wife opened the door to tell him that Mr. Darlington was wanting to speak with him, but would not come into the house.

"Now for it," thought the curate, rousing himself for the anticipated fray, for he never questioned what might have called forth the visit. His mind was too full of that one idea, and he stepped out into the hall, where a cold wind was rushing about, slamming the doors, and whistling mournfully through all the house.

"Pray come in, Mr. Darlington," he begged, going out on the steps and standing shivering beneath the dark wintry sky.

"No, thank you," said the other, shortly. "I am merely come to say good-by, we shall be off to-morrow or the next day. I should be too busy to see you if I called. This place is all very well in the summer. What's that?"

"Nothing," said the curate, peering into the darkness. "What do you mean? I wish you would come in."

"But it's confoundedly cold in the winter; that's why we are leaving," went on Mr. Darlington, rapidly. "And I hate the country to walk in, one is so apt to meet all sorts of people. You're not inclined for a walk, are you?"

"Certainly not," said the curate, "and really I think it would be best for you to go home if you will not come in with me. It's bitterly cold, and beginning to snow."

"The flakes were coming down thick and fast as he spoke.

"Then I will bolt!" said Mr. Darlington. "Good-night and good-by! Have you heard—I beg your pardon, I thought I was talking to some one. Good-night!"

He went off down the garden path, muttering strangely to himself, and Godfrey Bree stood watching his dark figure as long as it could be seen, little thinking that the departing man was hurrying carelessly on to meet his death.

But it was so. While the church-bells were ringing merrily, and men gathered their children about them on their bright hearths that Christmas night, unknown to them all a life went out in their very midst. Late, after all the cottagers had gone to rest, the servants from the White House roused Mr. Bree and Jim from the rectory to help them in their search for their master.

And they found him at the bottom of the stone quarry, where Godfrey had looked shudderingly down the first night he came to Maybeck. Dead! with broken, crushed limbs, but the white cold face unhurt even by a scratch, the eyes awfully wide open and staring now, that in life had never looked you fairly in the face.

An intensely cold day early in the following week, and the curate stood reading a short note that had just been given to him. It was from Emily Darlington, whose father he had buried; that morning.

"I am going," the writer said, "to leave this very afternoon. I can not see you; I cannot write to you again, till I have waked from this horrible dream; for so it seems to me. Be content to wait, perhaps for months; than I will write again."

So, with the best patience he could muster, he bid her hiding, and waited, not knowing where or with whom she was; hearing no word of or from her, watching sadly the rapid breaking up of her deserted home, the close-shuttered dreariness of the rooms in which he had so often seen her; hearing the endless surmises as to her fortune, which was unanimously decided to be large; and her future, about which no one knew any thing, but all had plenty to say, until at last, even in the little gossiping village, the subject was worn out, and the horror of the accident (if accident it was, and that God only know) died away from men's minds, and left them free to discuss the incoming tenants of the White House.

The curate's love-story had been well kept from the small world about him; none knew how anxiously he was waiting among them for the last chapter of that history.

It came at last, the letter she had promised—written to him from an old town just by and the hills which lay before him as he read the pages.

"I am not at all the same person who went away five months ago," she wrote. "When I was very rich, how I am very poor. I have only my dead mother's money to call my own, it is not a hundred a year. You see, I try to tell you the worst first, and yet not all the worst. How shall I write the truth about him, my father! He was always so good to me, and yet I never could be happy with him—not quite, and now I am going to make you hate him. You thought perhaps he had been born to plenty of money, or had earned it in some business or profession. Unhappily it was not so. He was only a junior partner in a firm of lawyers. His senior was an old man, and a very rich one, who had but one relative, a niece, to inherit his property. I think a marriage was once thought of between my father and this lady, but she preferred a man of her own choice, fitting in some respects, but most obnoxious to her uncle. A private marriage between them enraged Mr. Laurence into disinheriting his niece; and at his death, a few years later, it was found that he had left upwards of thirty thousand pounds to my father, making no mention of his then widowed niece in his will. That much all the world knew, and even then cried shame upon the old man for his harshness. But they did not know what my dear mother discovered when to late—that my father had secretly helped on the distasteful marriage, and had then, alas! done all in his power to foster the estrangement between the uncle and niece, even—how could he do it!—keeping from her knowledge of her uncle's illness, fearing lest at the last moment she should come between him and his expected fortune; and, worst of all, he told his lying partner that his niece refused to come, though he had sent entreating her to do so. I could tell you much more but surely this is too much. It almost breaks my heart to write it. It quite broke my mother's heart when she knew all the truth. The fortune was a misery and a shame to him, as it has been to me. I thank God, I am rid of it now, and all that wretched inheritance from my poor father has gone to its rightful owner, Mr. Merlin. Would it were possible that any deed of mine could atone to her for all the misery my father's act brought her! But I can do no more. I have kept my promise to my mother, who told me the truth only to impress on me the need of acting as I have done with the money as soon as I had the power, and I only tell you to justify myself. Surely I need not ask your pity for my father and for me. It is not an awful thing to say his death lifted a load from my heart, although he was so good to me, and I loved him so when I was a child? Now you know why your story about Charlie Merlin troubled me so. Now I have told you all. Remember, you are not bound to me by any word of promise. It was clearly kept as apart when you spoke to me on Christmas-eve. I dared not tell you then what you know now. If your poverty stands between us now, so be it; no single thought of mine shall ever reproach you." Then a lot of girlish weakness stole in? "But I should like to see you once more."

"Once!" cried the curate joyfully; "nay, that she shall!" And he might also have added, "and forever;" for the next day's meeting was but the first of many, and the weeks were but few before the two joined homes as well as hearts, and set out to face the world together, not over rich, but strong in youth and love—one of them at least living a new life, freed from the heavy burden that another's sin had bound upon him earlier years.

"DOUBTLESS THE

Best Cough Medicine

IN THE WORLD."

[From one of the oldest and very best Houses in America.]

MESSRS. CUTLER BROS. & CO.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, March 13, 1872.

Please send us Ten gross of all and Five gross large "Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam." This is doubtless the best Cough Medicine in the World, (original) ACLAND & CO.

P. S.—Tens upon this have sold this Balsam for over thirty years.

[From one of Boston's most estimable citizens.]

No. 5 Worcester Sq., Boston, March 24, 1872.

Messrs. CUTLER BROS. & CO.

In ordering another small lot of your invaluable

Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam,

I should like to tell you what I know about it, in order that others may have the benefit of my EXPERIENCE.

Since this Balsam first came to my notice, in 1848, I have kept it constantly in the house, never allowing myself to be out of it overnight. In all those

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS,

it has not failed in a single instance, to give me immediate relief, and I will say the same in regard to my mother, whose

LIFE WAS SAVED

by this (I cannot but think) when was a case of Congestion of the Lungs, and although attended by a most skillful Physician, had seemed to fail, constantly, so that we despaired of her recovery, when an old friend and neighbor persuaded the trying the Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam. The result was most gratifying, I assure you.

RELIEF WAS IMMEDIATE

and recovery rapid. She is now over 82 years old, and is active and well. Whenever she gets a sore cold, which happens once in a while, she takes thirty to sixty drops, according to the violence of the cough, which has always yielded to a day or two's taking of the Balsam only on retiring at night. With it the

IRRITATION

is at once subdued, and a good night's sleep secured. I will mention another case, that of a young lady acquaintance, who

DIED AT THE LUNGS

and coughed frightfully, in a light sweats and was fearfully reduced. She left Boston for her country home, 18 miles away, as we supposed to die. I sent her a bottle of your Balsam, and was happy in satisfaction to hear that she was much better. She continued taking it for a while and got

ENTIRELY WELL,

and is living now, which fact is to be ascribed mainly to the use of the VEGETABLE PULMONARY BALSAM. Very truly yours,

JOHN CAPEN

As there are many imitations, be careful to get the genuine. Price in large bottles, which are much the cheaper, $1.00, small bottles, old style, 50 cents.

GILES'

LINIMENT IODIDE OF AMMONIA.

A MESSAGE TO THE SUFFERING.

When a remedy is productive of such relief as to excel all other remedies in its curative results, it is duty to make it known as generally as possible. This one seldom is the exception, this preparation, which we feel is to bring before the public in LINIMENT IODIDE AMMONIA.

The remarkable cures it has effected classes it as one of the most important and valuable remedies ever discovered for the cure and relief of pain in any form. It cures Neuralgia, Face Ache, Rheumatism, Gout, Fever & Ague, Chilblains, Sore Throat, Erysipelas, Bruises, or Wounds of every nature, in which the effects of external applications are at all magical, in which its internal administration is found to be most efficacious. Physicians prescribe it for their patients and record it their unbounding approbation as an invaluable discovery.

The LINIMENT IODIDE OF AMMONIA is an essential appointment in all well regulated stables, and where large numbers of horses are provided for, and where there is a liability to the visitation of a class of epidemic diseases for which this preparation is a recognized remedy. No stable should be without it, for no stable can really be deemed safe until it is supplied with it.

We append a few of the many testimonials, laudatory testimony to the universal favor with which this medicine has been received by the public.

Testimonials.

Its usefulness and excellence of the mixture as Iodide, the active principle, I have experienced from Hahn to Giles' Liniment Iodide of Ammonia.

THOMAS BAKER, Holland's Theatre.

For headache, neuralgia, sore throat, inflamed joints of the feet, GILES' LINIMENT IODIDE OF AMMONIA never failed me yet.

J. HENRY MACONIGLE, Booth's Theatre.

MR. WM. M. GILES, Chemist, 461 Sixth Avenue: I suffered with rheumatic pains in my limbs and joints, and found no relief until I tried your LINIMENT IODIDE OF AMMONIA, which immediately relieved. Am now cured. ROBERT H. SMITH, Head Paintyman on board Steamer Jesse Hoyt.

GILES' LINIMENT IODIDE OF AMMONIA is a sure cure for lameness in the breast, and removes all swellings and hard lumps. A NURSING MOTHER.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 7, 1874.

DR. GILES:—While on duty as fireman on engine 47, about ten miles from this city, on Shore Line Road, was accidentally thrown off against a rock, train under full head, at at thirty-five miles an hour. Was very painfully bruised. Your agent was on board. He furnished me with two bottles of Liniment Iodide of Ammonia, from which I received the greatest possible benefit. In four days I was quite well, and have now ready to commence work. My aged mother also used the Liniment for rheumatism, which it cured. JOHN GAFFNEY.

HARNESS HIPPODROME.—We take no more found anything equal to GILES' LINIMENT IODIDE OF AMMONIA. Bruises, wounds, stiffness, lameness, pains in the muscles, swellings immediately disappear. It is just what we long wanted, and we now use nothing else. In thirty years' experience in Europe and America, I have never met anything like it.

L. B. WOODS,

Veterinary Surgeon, Barnum's Hippodrome.

NEW YORK, June 1st.

MR. WM. M. GILES, Chemist: Sir—You now discovery, LINIMENT IODIDE OF AMMONIA, surpasses anything for splints, strains, lameness in the limbs or shoulders, &c., wind galls, and hard, bony swellings on the joints. It is truly marvelous.

Yours very truly, RALPH DOLE,

Veterinary Surgeon, 330 West 25th St.

BOSTON, July 13, 1874.

MR. W. M. GILES:—In the match between the Athletics of Philadelphia and the Boston Club, played July 12th, 1874, at Boston, I fell and displaced my left knee cap. Your agent fortunately happened to be present. He immediately applied your Liniment, and with instant relief.

HARRY C. SHAFFER, Boston Base Ball Club.

BOSTON, Sept. 24, 1874.

MR. WILLIAM M. GILES, Chemist: DEAR SIR—Your Agent, Mr. Guy S. Pearce, called on me early in July last to introduce your LINIMENT IODIDE OF AMMONIA. Being a stickler in regard to the great variety of articles patent for the cure of all sorts of diseases, I had no faith in your Iodide, but after a long discussion with your agent, it occurred to me that I had a horse I was using for private that had a bone blind on his near forward leg. I told him if he brought it would remove that bunch, I would try it. Suffice it to say, I have used it very persistently till the present time, and I now find it nearly removed, and think it will be totally disappeared entirely. From this trial of your remedy I cheerfully recommend its use to any one who has a horse or horses afflicted in this way. I would further say that while using it for the horse, the same bottle started another bunch on the off leg; the Liniment was applied immediately, and the bunch has disappeared. R. H. HATHORNE, another year of the Marvelous Scientific results of the application of the principles of

BIOMETRY,

Or the Measure of Life.

What is That

It is the science and art of providing the probable length of life of a person—deducing it from the Ancestry, Constitution (the measure in size, form, color, and constitution of its various parts, being the signs and indications), Habits, Vocation, Residence, Intelligence, Instincts, Health, Age, and what ever else, if also there be, which can affect the potentialities of life.

By the application of this science, Life Risks can be

GRADED AND RATED

as in Fire and Marine Insurance, and thus, and only thus, can

EQUITY TO ALL CLASSES,

AND THE

Lowest Cost of Premiums

TO THE

BEST GRADES,

With perfect security be obtained

Lowest Cost. Perfect Security.

TERM-LIFE (LABOR-TERM) INSURANCE, "NATURAL-PREMIUMS."

What is That

It is adapted to secure to a family, in case of the decease of the bread winner during the period of his productive labor, an income correspondent to the yearly wants of that labor.

"Natural Premiums" is the title plan of "pay the yearly cost," or "pay as you go," and put nothing into a company which, both on account of cost and security, may better be kept by the assured.

The two SCIENTIFIC IDEAS above named are as yet fully applied only by the

AMERICAN

COMPANY.

The idea of GRADING AND RATING Life Risks cannot be applied by any other company already started, since, if it should adopt the method of grading, the best risks now insured in it would of course drop their present policies to take out better ones, to wit, at the lower premiums to which they are entitled, that the inferior risks would stay, and pay the premiums so much less than they ought to be for them.

The idea of Term-Life "Natural Premiums" is not applied by the other companies, because, as they say, they would not, on their "average" plan of taking all insured persons at the same premium, get enough to cover the expense of their numerous losses.

Hence, all other companies "make faces" at the American Popular, and "call names," about which it does not care a fig, if it can only, as it does, secure the approbation of the scientific and thoughtful, and the patronage of the probably long-lived.
